Los invitamos a participar del Webcast Live from New York Emerging Markets Back from the Edge: Managing Through a Sluggish Global Recovery. Tendrá lugar el día martes 29 de septiembre de 10 am a 13.30 am. A continuación, un adelanto de los temas que se abordarán: * Emerging markets have survived the worst of the global financial crisis without widespread or severe damage to creditworthiness thanks to stronger sovereign balance sheets and policy frameworks, buttressed by an impressive international policy response coordinated by the G20. But while the disruption to international banking markets and capital flows to emerging markets has clearly eased, they still face the major challenges of low growth, rising unemployment and stagnant household incomes, potentially pressuring social and political stability. Meanwhile corporate and banking sector credit quality continues to deteriorate, while falling tax revenues, rising social spending and measures to support the financial sector are increasing fiscal risks. The Fitch Ratings Emerging Markets conference will examine these negative trends in sovereign, bank and corporate credit quality across the emerging market sphere and ask to what extent the major EM countries – including, China, India, Russia, Brazil and Mexico – will be able to shelter their growth performance from what is projected to be an anemic global economic recovery in 2010.
